

Stunning Photos of the Super Blood Wolf Moon

By Allie Weintraub

Nbclosangeles, Jan 21, 2019

On Sunday, Jan. 20, 2019, skywatchers around the world took in views of a total lunar eclipse combined with a supermoon, where a full moon appears a little bit bigger and brighter thanks to its slightly closer proximity to earth. There won't be another total lunar eclipse until the year 2021.

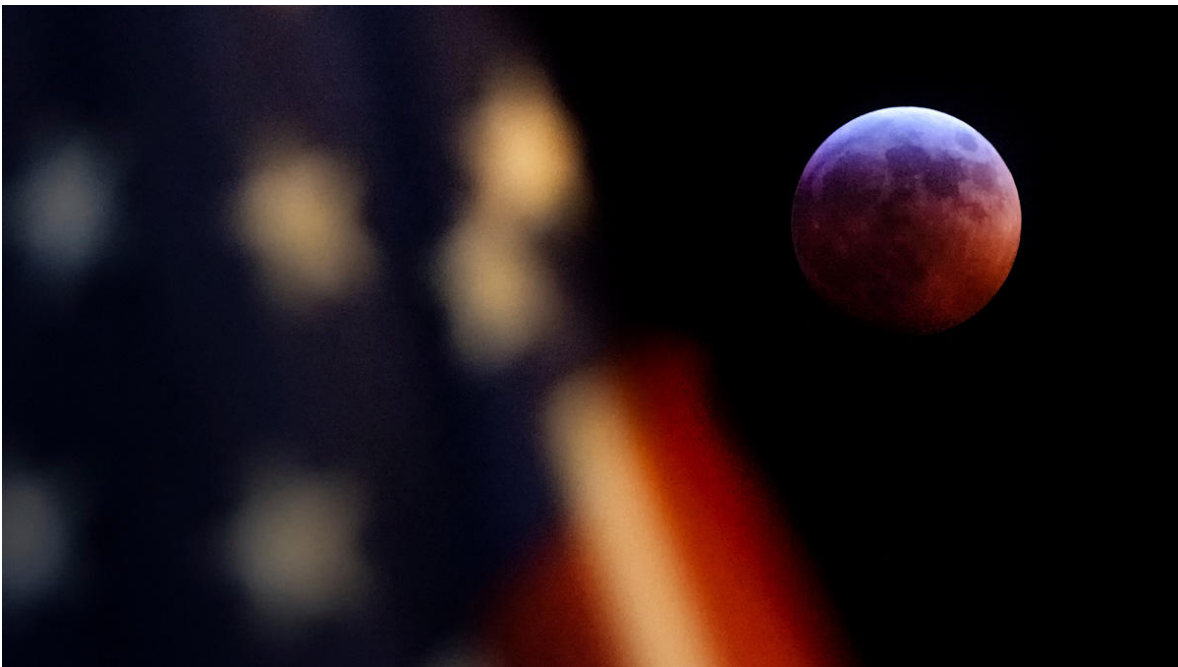

Claude Paris/AP

The full moon is seen during a lunar eclipse in Marseille, southern France.

Getty Images

Composition of several images of the Moon shows the different stages of the moon eclipse in Bogota, Colombia on Jan. 21, 2019.

J. David Ake/AP

A U.S. flag in downtown Washington flies in front of the moon during a lunar eclipse.

Peter Komka/AP

The moon fully shadowed by the Earth is seen above the castle of Salgó during a total lunar eclipse near Salgotarjan, 109 kms northeast of Budapest, Hungary.

Petros Giannakouris/AP

The supermoon sets over Larissa, the ancient and medieval acropolis of Argos, one of the oldest cities in the world.

Leo Correa/AP

A blood moon rises above Christ the Redeemer statue during a lunar eclipse in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

Gary Hershorn/Getty Images

The Super Wolf Blood Moon lunar eclipse passes over One World Trade Center on Jan. 21, 2019 in New York City.

Luca Bruno/AP

A woman stands watching the full moon, at the City Life neighborhood in Milan, Italy.

David McNew/Getty Images

Clouds pass before a lunar eclipse and supermoon approaching totality on Jan. 20, 2019 near Barstow, California.

Virginia Mayo/AP

The Super Blood Wolf Moon eclipse between branches of a tree in Antwerp, Belgium.

Ringo H.W. Chiu/AP

People watch the supermoon rise behind the downtown Los Angeles skyline, from Kenneth Hahn Park.

Julio Cortez/AP

The moon is seen in its waxing gibbous stage as it rises behind the Empire State Building, seen from Jersey City, N.J.

More Photo Galleries